Message from the editor

Greetings!

I hope all of my colleagues are cruising through a great year! This has been one of change here at my high school with new schedules and adding two additional grades to a building still under construction.

We as teachers are all confronted with changes and challenges throughout the year and yet we still manage to persevere. So, hats off to all the world language teachers who endure the trials and tribulations of teaching our students a second language and in some cases a third language.

In this issue you will find some important upcoming dates and opportunities for both you and your students. In addition to attending our festival in March, consider having your students apply for the Millersville Language Camp scholarship or the Torzok scholarship.

See you at the language festival,

Jay DiBernardo

IUP Spring Methodology Conference on Foreign Language Teaching Friday, April 21, 2017

We hope you'll join us again for another professionally stimulating IUP Spring Methodology Conference on Foreign Language Teaching! The 2016 conference will be held on Friday, April 21, 2017. As always, you can look forward to this yearly event that brings you exciting new ideas that you can take back to your classroom, current issues in language education for you to discuss, opportunities for you to network with other language professionals, and the latest textbooks and materials for you to peruse.

As in the past, by attending the full-day conference, you can earn up to six hours of Pennsylvania Act 48 professional education credits.

Our Keynote Speaker for 2017 will be Bonnie Adair-Hauck, a second language research professor for the University of Pittsburgh's European Studies Center and the European Union Center of Excellence where she also serves as a language consultant for educational institutions both nationally and internationally.
